New Jersey prescribers are limited by government regulations to specific dollar amounts for breakfast, lunch, and dinner when associated with "promotional activity." Meals provided incident to an "education event" are not subject to specified meal limits. Vermont healthcare practitioners are prohibited by government regulations from receiving "anything of value" (including food) from medical device, pharmaceutical, and biological manufacturers. Any violation must be disclosed to the state of Vermont by Grifols.

Federal employees are prohibited by government regulations from receiving gifts (including meals) valued in excess of $20 on any occasion and more than $50 in a calendar year from any single contractor, except in connection with "widely attended gatherings" or incident to a society or membership unrelated to their government employment. In order to ensure compliance with these regulations, federal employees must pre-register for this program if the program is not in conjunction with a society meeting.
